300 THE NIGHT BEFORE NASEBY

It is recorded, that the night before this battle Cromwell spent the hours in prayer, in earnest supplication that the God of Battles would grant victory to his arms.

"It was on this high moor ground," writes Carlyle, "in the centre of England, that King Charles, on the 14th of June, 1645, fought his last battle, dashed fiercely against the new model army, which he had despised till then, and saw himself shivered utterly to ruin thereby. Prince Rupert, on the King's right wing, charged up the hill, and carried all before him; but Lieutenant-General Cromwell charged downhill on the other wing, likewise carrying all before him, and did not gallop off the field to plunder. He, Prince Rupert, on returning from his plunder, finds the King's Infantry a ruin; prepares to charge again with the rallied Cavalry; but the Cavalry too, when it came to the point, 'broke all asunder,' never to reassemble more. The chase went through Harborough, where the King had already been that morning, when in an evil hour he turned back to Naseby and gave the roundheads battle."

313 LAUNCE AND HIS DOG

"When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it! I have taught him—even as one would say precisely, Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher and steals her capon's leg. O, 'tis a foul thing when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things."—Two Gentlemen of Verona.

345 THE LAST HONOURS PAID TO THE BODIES OF COUNTS EGMONT AND HORN, after their execution, the 5th of June, 1568.

Philip the Second of Spain, in order to conceal his dark designs against the protectors of the religion of his rebellious subjects in the Low Countries, gave to Egmont the government of Artois and Flanders; but upon his return to Madrid, the tyrant's real plans became apparent, and he sent his favourite, the infamous Duke of Alva, to Flanders, with instructions to get rid of Egmont and his friend Count Horn. In order to secure them both, Alva invited them to dinner, under the pretence of wishing to consult them on public affairs. When they had entered his private room, they were seized and thrown into prison in Ghent, where they remained during nine months. At the expiration of this time they were carried to Brussels, under an escort of ten companies of Spanish soldiers. Here Alva compelled the criminal court to pronounce them guilty of high treason and rebellion, and to sentence them to be beheaded. The sentence was pronounced on the 4th of June, 1568, without any substantial evidence, and was supported only by the depositions of their infamous accusers. The sentence was executed the following day, and the patriots fell by the sword of the executioner, on a scaffold erected in the public square of Brussels.

347 PRESIDENT DURANTI

"The scene represented in the picture is the death of the President, or rather the moment preceding his slaughter. Duranti (Jean Etienne) son of a Toulouse Counsellor, a successful lawyer, was made Capitoule (Chief Magistrate of Toulouse) in 1563, afterwards Attorney-General of France, and, lastly, First President of the Languedoc Parliament by Henry III. His fidelity to the king became the cause of his death; he was massacred by the Ligneurs for having opposed their misdoings, and died 10th February, 1589.

425 BEFORE DINNER AT BOSWELL'S LODGINGS IN BOND STREET, 1769

Present: Johnson, Garrick, Goldsmith, Reynolds, Murphy, Bickerstaff, Davies, and Boswell.

"Garrick played round Dr. Johnson with a fond vivacity, taking hold of the breasts of his coat, and looking up in his face with a lively archness, complimented him on the good health which he seemed then to enjoy; while the sage, shaking his head, beheld him with a gentle complacency. One of the company, not being come at the appointed hour * * * * Goldsmith, to divert the tedious minutes, strutted about bragging of his dress, and I believe was seriously vain of it, for his mind was wonderfully prone to such impressions. 'Well, let me tell you,' said he, 'when my tailor brought home my bloom-coloured coat, he said, Sir, I have a favour to beg of you: when anybody asks you who made your clothes, be pleased to mention John Filby, at the Harrow in Water Lane.'"
